2016 Piccadilly Valley

Pinot Noir

ASHTON HILLS VINEYARD

The Adelaide Review, Dave Brookes - OCT 2017

"This wine stands out for its airy, ethereal demeanour; akin to a Poulsard from the Jura in France, there is a diaphanous curtain of ripe fruit, poised delicately with plenty of light/space with a lovely savoury palate. It's just delicious drinking."

Australian Wine Companion, Campbell Mattinson - OCT 2017

"Fruits of the forest, mint, florals, cherries and anise-studded deli meats. It offers a wide variety of aromas and flavours and does so with a great deal of charm. It will arguably drink at its best in its youth but there's certainly no hurry."

JamesSuckling.com, Nick Stock - JUL 2017

"Fresh cranberries and caramelized orange peel on the nose. The fruit is vibrant and tangy on the palate. Fresh, medium-bodied and a medium finish."

The Advertiser, Tony Love's Top 100 Wines - JUL 2017

"From Stephen George's famed Ashton Hills vineyard, now under the umbrella of Wirra Wirra wines, this is designated "Piccadilly Valley" as it includes fruit from nearby growers. This is such a lovely wine, with its violet fragrance and companion aromatics as you taste, and while quite powerful it sits evenly in the mouth with a cherry juice feel and soft spicy tannins that encourage just another little pour for good measure."

The Wine Front, Campbell Mattinson - JUN 2017

"Grown on both the Ashton Hills estate vineyard and on two nearby vineyards in the Adelaide Hills. Exquisite part of the world it is too. Vastly under-valued as a touring area. There's a semblance of warmth but from there it's pure Ashton Hills. Macerated cherries, a gentle sweet-sourness, oodles of spice, florals and a foresty/minty note. A general meatiness too. It has life, character and charm, and more than a little firmness to boot. Warmth is the only distraction."
