

Estación

Estación, Spanish for 'station', is a nod to the Colchagua Station on the Colchagua train route in Chile. The station is now a historical landmark and borders the property of the Estación vineyards. The railroad line was founded by American William Wheelwright, in 1851 and connected the north and south of Chile. The were east to west lines built, called "ramales" (or branches in Spanish) which connected to the main line. The Colchagua route was built over more than 50 years and was completed in 1890.

Bordered by the Andes and the Coastal mountains, the Colchauga Valley lies among these two ranges. Divided into four main areas, the newest vineyards of Estación are planted with everything from Sauvignon Blanc to Petit Verdort. This location has excellent sun exposure and cooling sea breezes, making it an ideal growing site. Additionally, located 10km from the ocean lies another vineyard that is planted with the majority of the Sauvignon Blanc grapes. Enjoy today at 8 C.

HOW IT LOOKS

Pale golden yellow, clear and bright.

HOW IT SMELLS

Fresh and zippy! Vibrant notes of bright gooseberry, sweet grass, and lime zest. Hints of grapefruit rind and grilled capsicum nestle on the backside. Subtle vegetal green notes, squash and oat aromas are also present.

FOOD PAIRING

Bright and mouth watering flavours has us craving ceviche or a white flaky fish dish. Sautéed green veggies with a bit of fat will also pair deliciously with the medium acidity.

HOW IT TASTES

Youthful and lively, the initial flavours are more citrus notes on the palate - lemon, lime and grapefruit. With a medium acidity it will leave your mouth watering with a nice rounded mouthfeel. Flavours of warm candied ginger, stewed peaches and green undertones linger with a smooth finish. Bright, fresh and well balanced flavours make for a great sipper on the patio. Perfect for a hot summer day or to make a party perfect white sangria!
